

The Chiang Mai Assignment

Frank Hurst

25th January 2018 | paperback | £11.99

'Thrilling, vividly described ... if you want to know how the war on drugs was actually conducted you can't do better than read Frank Hurst'.

Bangkok Post

-
- The much-awaited second novel in the Golden Triangle trilogy: a fast-paced thriller set in London and Thailand providing a harrowing insight into the hidden world of drugs smuggling.
 - A former criminal investigator with a wide-ranging career working with HM Customs, Scotland Yard and the British Foreign Office, Frank Hurst gives the reader an authentic behind-the-scenes look at the methods employed to penetrate serious organised crime groups.
 - In 1988 the author was part of the international operation that arrested and convicted Howard Marks aka Mr Nice, and his associates.
-

When M16 offer to help Customs trap an international drugs smuggler all is not what it seems In his long-awaited sequel to the acclaimed The Postmistress of Nong Khai, Frank Hurst takes us on an exhilarating and fascinating journey through the dangerous opium jungles of the Golden Triangle and the corridors of power in London where deception and conspiracy loom large at every turn.

About the author:

Frank Hurst divides his time between West Sussex and northern Thailand and is currently writing the last novel in his highly commended trilogy. His books follow the adventures of intelligence officer Mike Rawlin as he tries to capture a dangerous international drugs trafficker in South East Asia. Frank's work in international drugs intelligence took him to many parts of the world and this experience has been invaluable in both adding perspective and depth to his writing and helping create convincing fictional characters and intricate plot lines.

www.frankhurst.com

For further information or to arrange an interview or written piece please contact Debbie Elliott at Debbie@cameronpm.co.uk or phone 07941172319